FOUNDER OF RELIGION FOR POOR VISITS SALT LAKE

General William Booth, the Grand Old Man of the Salvation Army, Delivers Three Addresses.

Crowds of People Listen to the Venerable Leader Tell of the Work of That Great Religious Organization.

EPIGRAMS BY GENERAL BOOTH.

Sin is sin, no matter how it is dressed up.
Don't wait until you are rich before beginning to help people.
My religion is to do right seven days in the week.
We may not convert the rich but we save their prodigal sons and daughters.
I love the rich for what I can get out of them for the aid of the poor and needy.
I didn't embrace religion simply to save my own skin, as some men do, but to help others.

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH, the venerable founder of the Salvation Army, that organization of Christian soldiers that is marching through the highways and byways of the world, carrying religion and relief to the sinful and the needy, spent yesterday in Salt Lake, preaching the doctrines of his faith to throngs of people. The man who more than half a century ago organized that band of soldiers which lifts the drunkard from the gutter to place his feet in a better path, which rescues the fallen woman and places her in a Christian home, and which cares for the sick and destitute, has grown old; the crow's-foot of time has upon his face and the snows of life's winters are upon his head; but with none the less energy he travels about the world prosecuting his work of saving the sinner.

Accompanying General Booth and constituting his party are his daughter, General Emma Booth-Tucker, Colonel John Lawley, Major Fred Cox, Colonel E. J. Higgins, Staff Captain Wright, Captain Hester Dammes, Colonel French, Major Wood and Staff Captain Wood and wife.

His Personal Appearance.
General Booth, the head of the party and the commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army in all the world, is a character whose name will never be forgotten so long as there is left in the remotest corner of the world a little band of men and women attired in blue and red uniforms, who gather on the street corners with their lanterns and drums and preach to the passing masses. In personal appearance he is a man of striking characteristics.

Although 72 years of age, he carries himself as erect as a soldier. Unfailing energy is written in every feature. Kindness and compassion beam from every line of his time-worn face. Decision and firmness are indicated by his every action. A nervous temperament that will not let him be still for a moment, keeps him pacing to and fro, swaying his body or rising on his toes and heels, while making an address, praying or conversing. The wealth of owners with their hair and beard that encircle the sharp-cut features give to his face an appearance of ruggedness that is striking.

At Home in the Pulpit.
In the pulpit the general is perfectly at home. His voice, though grown hoarse with age and hard usage, is firm and strong. He makes no effort at oratorical effect, but speaks his thoughts in simple, direct, and unadorned sentences with a continual swaying of the body or a nervous pacing to and fro. He calls a spade a spade and speaks his sentiments regardless of the opinions of others. His conversation and addresses are marked by the peculiar English accent and colloquialisms. For emphasis on an important phrase it is his habit to repeat the phrase three times with rising inflection. Rarely does he gesture with his hands.

MOORISH SULTAN'S COUP

By Bringing About Reconciliation With His Brother, Mulai Mohammed, He Disintegrates the Rebellious Forces and Discredits the Pretender to the Throne.

TANGIER, Morocco, Jan. 4.—According to news received here from Fez, the sultan, Mohammed V, has been reconciled with his brother, Mulai Mohammed, the capital has attained the desired object of depriving the pretender of his prestige, and the latter has retired, discredited, to Laaz.

He has been deserted by a number of the local tribes, who dispersed to make sure of their booty.

Buhamara, the pretender, having claimed the intention of enthroning Mulai Mohammed, his rebellion has no longer any reason to continue as the sultan has publicly reconciled himself with his brother and Mulai Mohammed has made a solemn entry to Fez accompanied by the populace.

The sultan has announced the appointment of Mulai Mohammed as governor of the province of Fez, thus disproving the rumors that Mulai Mohammed aspired to the throne. When this had been done, according to the official authority for these statements, the tribes around Fez swore fidelity to the sultan and denounced Buhamara as an impostor whom they would prevent from coming to Fez.

All immediate danger has disappeared. The routes from Fez to the coast are open. It is said the sultan is now preparing a large expedition with the intention of crushing the rebellion.

BITTER FIGHT IN COLORADO

Both Sides Threaten to Throw Out Legislators.

THE SENATORSHIP AT STAKE

RESULT MAY BE A DEADLOCK—SITUATION MIXED.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 4.—The senatorial situation in Colorado is becoming decidedly complicated and should present declared plans be carried out the contest over the selection of a successor to Senator Henry M. Teller, which will begin in earnest with the convening of the legislature on Wednesday next, will be, to say the least, exciting and more likely spectacular. The solid support of the Democratic wing of the legislature for Teller is still maintained, while the Republican strength is paralyzed and among four candidates, of whom former Senator E. O. Wolcott is the most conspicuous.

At a meeting of the Democratic state central committee, the matter of the threat of the Republican majority in the house to unseat the entire Arapahoe Democratic delegation was discussed and resolutions adopted to the effect that it is "the right and duty of the senate to utilize the same constitutional right and authority and restore the equilibrium."

The majority in the senate is Democratic and should their threat to "meet revolution with revolution" be carried out, it would bring about a condition rendering a selection of a senator impossible. With a solid Democratic senate, it is claimed a deadlock could be maintained to the end.

It had been practically agreed that next Tuesday night a caucus of the Republican members of the house would be held to select a speaker, but it develops that several members have refused to be bound by the actions of the leaders, claiming that they were not elected on a condition.

LEAVES JAIL CELL TO BE MARRIED

(Special to The Herald.)
Cody City, Wyo., Jan. 4.—Peter S. Terrill, the young man of Burlington, who was arrested last week charged with complicity in the recent hold-up of the Brim saloon and gambling house, has been released.

Young Terrill was to have been married at Burlington Christmas eve to a daughter of Thomas F. Jones, one of the leading residents of that place, but his sudden arrest caused a postponement of the ceremony. Although a number of persons who were in the saloon at the time of the hold-up were of the opinion that Terrill was one of the masked men that committed the robbery, Miss Jones would not believe her sweetheart guilty, and her father shared her belief.

Mr. Jones was so confident that young Terrill was innocent that he came to Cody and engaged a lawyer to defend him. When the case came before Judge Newton the prisoner was promptly discharged, there being no evidence against him. It now develops that the young man was in the country, many miles from Cody, at the time the robbery was committed.

Miss Jones and Terrill were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents in Burlington last night, the event being followed by a dance in the country folk for miles around participated.

GEORGE A. LOWE PASSES AWAY

Prominent Business Man Died Here Yesterday.

MEETS HIS END SUDDENLY

HOW HE HELPED ADVANCE THE INTERESTS OF THE STATE.

GEORGE A. LOWE, one of the oldest and best known business men of Salt Lake, died suddenly yesterday morning of heart disease at his residence, 308 East First South street.

No arrangements have been made for the funeral. They cannot be perfected until responses have been received from several telegrams sent to relatives and friends in the east. Inasmuch as Mr. Lowe was one of the trustees of the First Congregational church, it is expected that the services will be held in that edifice unless Mrs. Lowe and her daughter decide upon holding them in the residence.

Death came to Mr. Lowe as peacefully as a child drops off to sleep. When he breathed his last he was unconscious, in a semi-slumber. He was lying on the sofa in the parlor of his home, surrounded by his wife, daughter and servants. He had not the least premonition of death; it came quickly, but peacefully.

Arises as Usual.
Mr. Lowe arose at his usual hour yesterday morning. After his accustomed morning bath, he descended to the parlor, where he was soon joined by his daughter. While in the act of attempting to remove his smoking jacket Miss Lowe noticed that her father had turned an unnatural color in the face, his complexion assuming almost an ashen hue. When asked what was the matter, if he felt ill, Mr. Lowe replied that he felt a little nauseated, and would lie down on the couch for a few minutes.

Mrs. Lowe entered the room a moment later, and going to the side of her husband asked him what was the matter. He replied that he felt a little ill. When she suggested that she telephone for a physician, Mr. Lowe said:

"No, do not do it; I do not think I am as sick as that."

Those were the last words he uttered. A moment later, he lay still. Mr. Lowe showed distress in his breathing. These symptoms of something wrong alarmed Mrs. Lowe, and she telephoned for Dr. J. M. Durr. Before he could arrive Mr. Lowe had lapsed into unconsciousness and passed away.

Mr. Lowe left a wife, Mrs. Anna Lowe; a daughter, Miss Catharine Lowe; two sisters, Mrs. C. M. Nye and Miss Susan B. Lowe of De Witt, Ia.; besides a number of relatives, including City Attorney George L. Nye of this city, the latter being named after him.

Helped to Build Up State.
In an unassuming way Mr. Lowe has done a great deal to advance the commercial and financial interests of the municipality and state. While he was not directly responsible for the building of two of the largest middle western railroads, which have done much toward the development and settlement of the "far, far west," he was closely connected with their construction.
